Call for papers

Theme

The fundamental forms of organizing the educational process both at school and at academic levels are based on individual learner and group work as well as whole-class instruction. Different types of learner interaction not only play a role in the complex dynamics of relationships among discourse participants but also ensure achieving educational goals. The need for limiting traditional teaching in favour of distant teaching that has arisen due to the spread of the Covid 19 pandemic has led theoreticians and practitioners to reflect more deeply on the advantages and disadvantages of these two instructional frameworks, with hybrid teaching appearing to be a way out.

This conference, which is devoted to the issue of organizing individual and group work in traditional and online education, is addressed to scholars in the area of pedagogy, psychology, the didactics of school subjects and glottodidactics, as well as to practising teachers of curricular and academic subjects at all levels of the education system.
